

REASONS FOR DENIAL OF ACCREDITATION OF
A Continuing Professional Development Course

In the past, applications for accreditation have been denied or delayed for the following reasons:

1. Insufficient course material or course outlines accompanying the accreditation application to determine the quality of the course;
2. Inadequate course material;
3. Topic not of relevance to the practical work of trainee solicitors and solicitors (e.g. it is not Hong Kong law and practice specific)

Up to one CPD point is granted per hour of teaching. Sessions containing participatory segments (rather than traditional lecture-based teaching) may receive more than one point per hour.
