How to Supercharge Your Practice's Approach to Managing Client Data: A Guide to Unlocking the Value of Legal Data Intelligence

Tuesday, 24 June 2025
(Repeat Circular)

1. In the past, data was finite. However, the advent of the internet has introduced an overwhelming volume of emails, spreadsheets, chats, and diverse data from across the globe. As legal professionals, we are tasked with uncovering the smoking gun, identifying collusion, detecting breaches of personal information, assessing intellectual property ("IP") theft, and understanding risks and exposures within contracts. Despite the varied challenges each practitioner faces and the expanding scope of legal and business skills required to support clients, one constant remains: the need to analyse and synthesise information and documents. This necessity led to the creation of the Legal Data Intelligence ("LDI") model. LDI provides a framework for law firms and corporate legal teams to address core data challenges and leverage technology to enhance their tasks.
2. The Practice Management Committee is organising a seminar to help our members understand new and emerging information and technology risks and work towards managing and mitigating them effectively.
3. In this seminar, the speaker will share with the audience on:
 - (a) an approach for safeguarding sensitive data whilst maximizing productivity and improving cost efficiency;
 - (b) demonstrate and provide practical tips on how LDI can streamline your practice and create new opportunities to support your organisation (or/and clients) effectively.
4. Details of the seminar are as follows:
